Early stage mediation

Style

“Straightforward” and “no nonsense” is the way clients, colleagues and his referral base describe Mark. This fuss-free approach makes him accessible and effective at resolving disputes. Entirely service oriented, Mark gets a real kick out of achieving the right result for his clients.

Experience

Mark is a dispute resolution specialist with a focus on commercial, employment and OH&S disputes. He has advised on thousands of different types of disputes over his 30 year career, only a handful of which advanced to court. In fact, Mark has the knowledge and experience to settle many disputes without any court proceedings being issued.

Approach

Mark knows that the best way to resolve a dispute effectively is to engage with all the parties at the earliest possible stage (even before any court proceedings have commenced), so he focuses as much of his practice as possible on early stage intervention and mediation of the focus areas.

With legal training and mediation expertise, Mark will accept assignments to do early stage mediation (with or without lawyers). This ability to combine his experience with a realistic approach to disputes can expedite resolutions, saving parties time, money and a lot of frustration with the litigation process.

“I would have been totally out of my depth without Mark. Once things begin to unravel, you start to second-guess all sorts and the way forward becomes less and less clear... what Mark achieved was the best result I could have hoped for.”
